Flying Private - The Benefits

With aircraft operational bases in the United Kingdom, across Europe, Africa and the United States, we are well positioned to provide global connectivity. A recent study identified 300 key potential virus transmitting touch-points when travelling commercially through major airports versus 70 when flying privately. Naturally this cannot be guaranteed at all times particularly when airports do not offer private terminals, but it is certainly food for thought.

It is also important to note that flying privately does not necessarily always mean flying by private jet. We are pleased to offer a fleet of turbo-prop aircraft, many of which are as comfortable as a private jet yet offer a lower operational cost.

BEFORE YOU FLY

Most airports have a separate private terminal, also known as a FBO, which accommodates private jet users and crews. This building is set apart from the main airport terminal, so private passengers can avoid this altogether.

Passengers generally spend very little time in the FBO, so they are very calm and uncrowded spaces. There are lounge facilities but most passengers prefer to go directly to their aircraft soon after arrival. Security and immigration checks are made of course, but there are no queues, and they are very fast and efficient.

Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, FBO staff has been wearing masks and gloves, with hand sanitiser made widely available to passengers and crew members. The number of social interactions has been reduced to a minimum, so passengers will only interact with one or two staff members during their short time at the FBO.

ON BOARD

Previously the private jet captain would have met his passengers in the FBO, and would have shaken their hands before accompanying them to the aircraft. This is now different – the captain will still greet the passengers, and communicate with them fully. But this is all done at more of a distance, with a welcome wave, rather than a handshake.

Inside the cabin and during the flight, crew members now remain at a distance, wherever possible. We're advising our customers to opt for a larger cabin aircraft if they wish to keep their distance from other passengers and crew. To limit the number of people on board, flight attendants are now only recommended on flights if they are necessary for passenger safety. Masks, gloves and hand sanitiser are available onboard for both passenger and crew use.

Catering is prepared and delivered to the aircraft by specialist premium catering suppliers, who are taking even greater hygiene measures than usual. This is already waiting on the aircraft when the passengers arrive. During the flight, the passengers serve themselves to food and drinks, to avoid others touching their food.

ON ARRIVAL

After landing, passengers pass quickly through the necessary checks at their arrival airport or, where possible (for example on domestic routes) can be collected by car on the ramp, after stepping off the aircraft. Private jets are thoroughly cleaned between each flight and sealed until the next one, paying close attention to high-touch areas

Introducing Dubrovnik

Known as the Pearl of the Adriatic it lies to the extreme south of Croatia, basking in glorious Mediterranean sunshine for much of the year.

Known as the Pearl of the Adriatic, Dubrovnik lies at the extreme south of Croatia, basking in glorious Mediterranean sunshine for much of the year. A fairy tale fortress of wonderful Baroque, Gothic and Renaissance churches, aristocratic palaces, red-roofed townhouses, magnificent monasteries and fascinating history, it is almost impossible to feel anything but uplifted and inspired here. It's simply breathtaking.

Wander the bustling boutiques, markets and bars; savour freshly caught seafood while gazing out to sea at sunset; walk along the iconic walls, or take a cable car up to Mount Srđ for the most spectacular views of Dubrovnik.

A UNESCO World Heritage Site, the Old Town and its towering walls rise above the 13th-century main street that literally sparkles in the sun. No wonder so many consider Dubrovnik to be such a precious gem. In fact, the origins of the Croatian language and its classic literature can be traced back here, and the city remains an epicentre of culture, art, music and science.

All this surrounded by a brilliant-blue seascape, charming beaches and idyllic islands. Take a Cable Car panoramic ride over the Old Town, where on even the rainiest of days, take in all the hues of utterly beautiful scenery.

The sheer magic of sampling different wines and production techniques is an invigorating component of the Mediterranean lifestyle. Follow the lead of savvy locals and taste wine varieties such as Pošip and Dingač.

The goldsmith's craft is one of the oldest crafts in Dubrovnik. Hunting for exactly the right piece to buy as a keepsake, locating just the right store, in the right hidden alley, is a very special part of the experience. Good luck with your search.

VILLA AGAVE

Contemporary Luxury Villa located on a private clifftop with a stunning panorama of Lokrum Island from five charming stone terraces, and with glorious views of Dubrovnik Old Town from the spotlit pool area, historic Villa Agave epitomises the very best of exclusive seaside villa retreats.

Surrounded by glorious gardens leading to a secluded beach and the turquoise waters of the Adriatic, historic Villa Agave rests on the remains of the 16th-century chapel of St. Lazarus (two of the original walls now forming part of the meditation room), within walking distance of Dubrovnik's medieval fortress walls.

Originally the exclusive summer house of the 19th-century English archaeologist, Sir Arthur Evans – most famous for unearthing Knossos Palace on the Greek island of Crete – Villa Agave is named after a Mexican plant introduced to Dubrovnik by sailors in the 16th century. The succulent's spiked leaves greet you along the cobbled pathway leading to the front door. It remains a haven for celebrities to this day.

Legendary film director Francis Ford Coppola chose Villa Agave as his Dubrovnik 'home away from home'; a place to rest and write in peace. He also stayed at and praises the nearby Hotel Excelsior Dubrovnik – a landmark retreat built in 1913 and still favoured by the famous – and where all Villa Agave guests are welcome to use the full suite of five-star facilities and services, including the Palm Terrace for decadent drinks at sunset, and perfect pampering in the spa.

With a 24-hour butler on hand throughout your stay, and a secluded cliff-side beach where you can lie while having a blissful massage, you will enjoy the flawless service for which Villa Agave is known and adored. In fact, virtually anything you wish for, we can provide.

This three-bed villa offers contemporary luxury and authentic antique charm, complemented by an open fireplace, four poster bed, exposed beams, original paintings and enchanting interior pieces.
